

STEP THREE: Messaging contacts

Now, putting two and two together, I go through and send each person a slightly customized version of that message I previously composed (in Create a blurb). I would create a different type of message for each type of helpful person

Notes on this:

- You might consider personalizing the message a bit so you take each person's individuality seriously. That said, in a lot of cases, ppl will understand that you're getting a project off the ground, and they'll be OK with receiving a message that has the vibe of a mass-message
- If you're dealing with a VERY LARGE contacts list, you might consider a mass-emailing tool like Yet Another Mail Merge
- The first time you do this, it may feel scary to message dozens of people. That's normal! But you're gonna have to get used to it – this is what scaling a project typically looks like
- More material on messaging specifically superconnectors in the next tab

Exercise: Custom messages

Take the blurb you wrote in Create a blurb and use it to generate a new one for each type of contact. (Note: I saved the category of superconnectors and mass audience outreach for later sections.) I've pre-filled a few contact types for you. Feel free to modify this table with your own types

Potential Students	Orgs That Might Advertise Our Classes	Friends who will help me promote anything

Ready? Now send the messages you've made here to the contacts on your contacts lists!

Congrats!