

STEP FOUR: Superconnector outreach

Some people take pride (and/or obsession) in connecting others – "superconnectors." Even if you only met an SC once at a party, SCs often don't mind getting asks from relative strangers

Eg say you're looking for a new CTO for your startup. That's value that the SC can provide to a prospect in their own network. So don't be shy – worst that happens is that they're too busy to respond (don't take it personally)

Make a list of superconnectors you know. Then reach out to them

Message 1

Hey X, I'm presently sitting at a "barn-raising" that I'm throwing to support the launch of Fractal Tech Hub. I could benefit from your talents as a fellow superconnectory person. Mayhaps can I ask you for a ~10min favor? 🙏

Message 2

My volunteer team is matching the Hub with prospective students for their 3-month coding bootcamp. It's designed to turn mid-career professionals into startup engineers capable of making ~$150K within a year.

Could I ask you to copy-paste this message in front of any relevant groupchats or individuals...ppl who might benefit from a career change to something more interesting/higher income?
