

Bonus things to try

Ambassadors

You can recruit a group of ambassadors/advisors/supporters and ask them for help getting the word out. One lightweight version of this: I invited a bunch of my friends to a Twitter GC called “Boost squad” where ppl post the messages they want retweeted by the others. You can also host IRL events where your community gathers in person to help you do outreach (you can even have them each use this guide!)

Flyers

You can put flyers/posters in places where ppl might want your offering. Eg if you’re running a 3D printing class – leave flyers in a local hacker space

Announcements

You can go to events where the audience might be interested in your offering and ask if you can make an announcement about it. (IMPORTANT: Make sure ppl have some easy way to follow up – eg you can already have added the link to your offering to the Partiful or posted it in the WhatsApp group)

Other strategies

- Paid ads (esp targeted ones) – this results in lower-quality in-bound than tapping networks, but can work well if you have ways of filtering inbound (eg application forms)
- Cross-promotion partnerships with other orgs
- Becoming a meta-lister – eg let’s say you’re launching adult classes. You could launch an SEO-optimized website that lists providers of adult classes around your city, including your own classes

Influence: Science and Practice

This book is basically the bible for doing effective promotion. Just don’t be evil with it